What's the definition of a Money ritual? Money Rituals are practices by some people who believe they can create wealth for individuals with the use of spells, charms, and sacrifices e.t.c. Money rituals can be traced to various parts of Africa, but it can also be seen in many countries such as India, Nigeria, Ghana and even the west, where people use animals for (sacrifices) without no body effect or human organs of their body, The result of all this is usually seen as "Blood Money" and was commonly attributed to different traditional Gods such as "CHI AKU "(The spirit of wealth), Shankara (The god of thunder), e.t.c. Many people over the years have visited the temple of the HARAGON CONFRATERNITY today they are living in luxury life, and the news of people who have been successful as a member is over the place. Why do you have to sell your kidneys for ipads, iPhones and treasure, why not save your time and join the moving train today without no human blood.
